Essential features of Campus France's short programs

As every international student knows, arriving in a new country is when everything that one has imagined is tested against reality. And although the discovery of a new culture often is experienced as a shock, when it comes to France that shock is most often felt as a recognition because essential attributes of the country are so widely known.

Above all, France is another way of life, a way of “living differently” day by day that you are invited to share. The experience of French life and culture (music, film, plays, festivals, ...), history (heritage, values, ...), food (superb wine, bread, and cheese, from the market to your table), and even geography (each city and each region of the country is different) will enrich the memories of your stay in France.

An enviable cultural dynamism

Literature, cinemas, museums, theaters, operas, cafés, restaurants, and fashion are parts of daily life that confirm France's major role in the cultural domain. All year round, but particularly in summer, festivals and other events attest to this dynamism and to a genuine openness to world cultures.

The French language, your passport to a wide world

French, spoken by more than 220 million people throughout the world, is the official language of 32 countries on five continents. Along with English and German, it is the working language of the European Union, the three capitals of which—Brussels, Luxembourg, and Strasbourg—are French-speaking cities. French is also one of the six working languages of the United Nations, one of the two official languages of the International Olympic Committee, and an official language of the African Union.

Intensive courses in French

Objectives

Courses are designed to build French-language proficiency in specific areas in response to each student's needs, goals, and interests: oral and written expression and comprehension, acquisition of appropriate grammatical structures, and situation-specific vocabulary.

They also emphasize various aspects of French culture and civilization through the use of authentic source documents (advertising, news items, multimedia files, literary texts, and so on), facilitating the development of varied language activities using the communicational approach.

All courses are aligned with levels A1 to C2 of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR).

Structure and Organization

25 course hours per week Monday through Friday, including sessions in the language lab and multimedia center.

Recognition

Upon completion of the program, students receive a certificate indicating the level attained.

Assurance of quality

Our partner centers guarantee that students will improve their French-language proficiency, provided they attend the courses and apply themselves.

Program of cultural, touristic, and recreational activities

Numerous cultural activities, events, and outings complement the instructional program, as well as half-and full-day excursions.

Access to the nonprofit and business worlds

Housing and meals

Housing options:

- >> Single room in university housing
- >> Room in a family home (partial board):
