Part artists, part technicians, interior designers conceive, rethink, bring to life, lay out, and create interior spaces while taking functional, budgetary, and technical constraints into account. They play a leading role, intervening at all stages of a project: from original sketches (design and visual representation of a space, technical definition) to layout (functionality, volume, materials, lighting, sound devices, etc.) and final delivery of the works in compliance with the social and cultural environment.

Covering design, set design, and decoration, interior design draws from the fine, decorative, and graphic arts equally. Interior designers conceive and lay out both private spaces (individual homes, businesses, etc.) and public spaces (museums, shops, hotels, theatrical productions, movie scenes and TV series, etc.) and public spaces (museums, shops, hotels, theatrical productions, movie scenes and TV series, etc.) and public spaces (museums, shops, hotels, theatrical productions, movie scenes and TV series, etc.) and final delivery of the works in compliance with the social and cultural environment.

Several important international networks for interior design education, student mobility, and the profession in general exist. These include (among others) the Fédération Européenne des Décorateurs & Architectes d’Intérieur (FEDAII), the European Council of Interior Architects (ECIA), comprising 14 organizations in EU member countries and the European Free Trade Association; and the International Federation of Interior Architects/Designers (IFI), founded in 1963, which currently brings together 23 countries and approximately 32,000 members. The major interior design schools are part of the Cumulus international network and offer regular exchange possibilities with their foreign counterparts.

International

Of all countries, France has the strongest tradition in the decorative arts, yet it dares to mix styles and break with tradition. French interior designers are sought after throughout the world and export their talents: Andrée Putman, Pierre-Yves Rochon, Jean-Michel Wilmotte, Philippe Starck, Pierre Yovanovich, Patrick Gilles, Dorothée Boissier, and Joseph Dirand, to name a few. A number of foreign interior designers have also come to work and opened studios in France, including India Mahdavi (Iran), Luis Laplace (Argentina), Patricia Urquiola (Spain), Joseph Karam (Lebanon), Paola Navone (Italy), and many others.

Several years of study are necessary to develop, in addition to creativity, architectural expertise and mastery of regulations specific to the construction industry (partitions, bearing walls, electricity, ventilation, heating, etc.).

However, interior design should not be confused with architecture. The length of study, the scope of action of construction focused on exterior spaces, and the responsibilities of these two professions are not the same.

Interior design programs are offered by both public and private institutions.
