ISIT provides training in all aspects of translation, interpreting, and intercultural management and communication. ISIT students are passionate about foreign languages and cultures. They seek to expand their qualifications by acquiring skills that they can apply in large international organizations and corporations or in smaller entities with an international focus. Most graduates land jobs as translators or interpreters, or work in various management fields, such as marketing, communication, export, human resources, and procurement. ISIT graduates are equipped to work productively in multicultural and multilingual teams, to provide communication services for multinational corporations. Graduates know how to close deals across cultural barriers and to develop highly technical and innovative projects based on R&D findings. ISIT’s essential working languages are French and English, supplemented by German, Italian, Spanish, Chinese, Arabic and other languages as needed for conference interpreting. ISIT’s learning programs are underpinned by:
- Support for all students as they prepare for their future career
- Professionalization of the curriculum through practical training and at least a year of internships in addition to exchanges with partner universities
- An excellent international reputation
- Forensic linguist

RESEARCH
CRATIL, the ISIT research center, specializes in the following fields: intercultural management and communication, translation sciences, interpretation, terminology, and applied linguistics. ISIT research teams work on European and international innovation and research projects for international organizations (United Nations, European Union), research organizations (including CNRS), think tanks, and corporations. The results of their work are disseminated through a steady stream of conferences and publications. ISIT welcomes scholars from all over the world under its research partnerships.

STRENGTHS
ISIT is a small, intimate school with an international faculty composed of academics and practicing professionals. It is a member of CIUTI, the international conference of university-based institutes of translation and interpretation: FIUC (association of 200 Catholic universities around the world), EMT (European Master’s in Translation), a network of master’s programs in translation. ISIT also is a member of FESIC, a federation of 27 French schools of management and engineering and of the Conférence des Grandes Écoles (CGE) and MoU (Memorandum of Understanding) established by the United Nations.
