Understanding Human, shaping the World

HEIP, an independent institution of higher education founded in 1899, prepares students from all over the world for careers in international relations, diplomacy, and political science. Students of more than a hundred different nationalities have studied at HEIP, contributing to its global influence. HEIP maintains numerous partnerships with renowned international institutions, enabling exchanges of students and faculty. HEIP campus offers students ideal conditions for learning, including a cafeteria, library, and study spaces. To pursue a degree at HEIP is to become part of history and to participate in an ongoing project.

◆ STRENGTHS
The keys to the success of HEIP students are a teaching faculty of very high quality trained at top universities, many with experience in high public office. Curricular content adapted to real-world practice: attentive support for students throughout their program; and a venerable international reputation and worldwide alumni network.

9 foreign languages taught: English, German, Spanish, Italian, Arabic, Chinese, Russian, Japanese, Portuguese

Students may study one full year abroad during the 3rd year of Bachelor's studies.

◆ LOCATION
HEIP main campus is located in the 15th district of Paris, close from the famous Eiffel Tower. HEIP has another campus in Lyon.

◆ MAIN PROGRAMMES OF STUDY
HEIP is providing programs dealing with political science and international relations. The school undergraduate studies are aimed at teaching general notions of international relations and political science; while the graduate programs are aimed at teaching specific topics related to political science and IR. Students have double-degree options with French and overseas institutions. All Master 2 programs are available in "alternance" (apprenticeship rhythm).

◆ RESEARCH
HEIP's teaching approaches are overseen by a scientific committee chaired by Jacques Soppelsa, honorary president of Université Paris I and professor of geopolitics at the Sorbonne. CESIP, the HEIP research center, publishes a biannual review featuring the research work of the school's faculty and young scholars.
